BANGOR EDITOR MEETS TED SWAN IN FRANCE

In his column, "Victory Bound with Our Maine Boys," John M. O'Connell, Managing Editor of the Bangor Daily News, tells of meeting Edward Swan of Bethel.

"My naval companions had business in Cherbourg so I went looking for a Maine man. I wanted to keep the record 100 per cent and expected I might have a little trouble. I had checked the Navy and there were none available at that time.

"Edward Swan of Bethel, a big six footer, and then some, is as good looking specimen of soldiery as you would want to find in anybody's Army when he puts on that smartly painted white helmet with the M P letters on front. Well, there he stood right in the middle of the road near where we parked our jeep. M P Headquarters was in the block so we went over to have a talk. I hoped we would find a few Mainiacs.

Swan used to operate the Bethel Golf club and although he doesn't look a bit shy out there on that busy corner of Cherbourg he was very much worried lest I would try to make him out a top notch golfer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Swan of Bethel and has been overseas two years. "This thing can't end any too quick for me," said Swan as we talked over outdoor pleasures in Maine about this time of year."

REV. WILLIAM PENNER IS NEW METHODIST MINISTER

Rev. and Mrs. William Penner and family have moved this week from Rumford Center to the Bethel Methodist parsonage. Besides his work with the local church, Mr. Penner, with Mrs. Penner's assistance, will continue to officiate in the Rumford Center and Rumford Point parishes, with services in all three places each Sunday morning.

Rev. and Mrs. Penner are natives of Nebraska and Minnesota, and came to Rumford Center two years ago from a charge in Iowa. In their student days, they were at the Rumford Center church one summer.

The family includes two daughters, Amy and Gertrude, who will be in the sophomore and freshman classes at the Academy, and a son, William, in the town schools.

OXFORD COUNTY FAIR

COMING SEPT. 12 TO 16

Oxford County Fair, which is being staged this year, Sept. 12-16 on the grounds between Norway and South Paris is one of the new Maine fairs which has retained all of the colorful features of the old time "cattle show" along with the modern trend of adding new features year after year. Highlighting this year's program is the five day pulling contests with sweepstakes, open to the State, scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday. With entries pouring in daily, patrons can be sure of seeing the keenest competition in years.

The World of Merit carnival, beans and all of the old time concessions will make up one of the largest midways ever to play the Oxford County fair. A number of pulp and paper companies will have booths and tents on the grounds in order that representatives may meet with growers of the section.

The familiar figure of Charles Bowker, who stood at the main entrance of the exhibition hall for more than a quarter of a century will be missing. His death occurred during the past year. John McKen, West Paris farmer, is the new superintendent of the hall and while following closely to many of the late Mr. Bowker's policies, has added a number of new ideas. Mr. McKen has made arrangements to have the huge exhibition hall open every night for the night patrons.

State officials have stated that the 4-H club exhibit at Oxford County Fair surpasses that of any other fair in Maine and officials are confident that this year will be no exception to the rule. This exhibit under the direction of club leader Catherine Powers will feature the following: Beans, Junior, Senior and Young Farmer; canning, poultry, cooking and housekeeping, sweet corn, calf, dairy, garden, room improvement, pig, potatoes, sewing, chick raising, poultry management.

Nine dashes are scheduled daily for the race meet with Edwin J. Keller as starter. This year the pari-mutuel betting will be conducted by Lee Mosher. A greatly enlarged pari-mutuel booth will make a record handle possible.

Night shows will start Wednesday and continue for the remainder of the week. A concert every afternoon and preceding the vaudeville show each night will be presented by the Norway Boys' and Girls' Band under the direction of Pearl Cook Kilborn.

Tuesday, the opening day, is designated as Young America Day and every grade school child is admitted free to the grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clunie, Mrs. Estelle Goggin and daughter Patricia, also Mr. and Mrs. Emery are among those who have arrived in town for the opening of the Academy year.

Low Grades Lumber May Be Sold in Sept.

Two important changes have been announced by WPB which will result in aiding the purchase of lumber by householders, repairmen, stores, and less essential industries.

Sawmills and lumber distributors may deliver No 4 and lower grades of Douglas fir, southern pine, western hemlock, western red cedar and sitka spruce, and No 3 and lower grades of all species of hardwood on uncertified orders. This provision is effective only during the month of September, although lumber distributors may deliver lumber to their customers on uncertified orders beyond September 30 where the lumber they sell was placed in transit by their suppliers before Oct. 1. The sale of such lumber is in addition to the 5000 to 8000 board feet previously set aside for uncertified orders.

The second important provision of "Direction 6" of the lumber and lumber products order, L-335, just released, provides that culls and rejects may be sold on uncertified orders, provided that the price charged for such lumber as a cull or reject is not more than 75 per cent of the OPA price for the lowest standard grade of the same species.

This procedure—a recommendation made by the Boston Regional office to Washington—will permit lumber yards to sell at a reduced price lumber which is unfit for the war effort but which may be of great assistance to the small contractor, carpenter, or repairman who can use small quantities of poor grade material for making repairs and where a first-quality lumber is not necessarily needed. Reinforcing the framing of a porch, repairing the cellar stairs, or similar uses will probably find this additional lumber a satisfactory substitute during the critical lumber shortage.

WAR SEEN AS INCREASING NEED FOR THE "ROAD FUND PROTECTION AMENDMENT"

The war has driven home the importance of devising a plan for highway uses exclusively, William S. Anderson, President of the Maine Road Fund Protection Committee, declares.

Maine is losing millions of dollars in gasoline taxes and registration fees as a result of gasoline and tire rationing. The latest figures show that revenues from the gasoline tax in 1943 in Maine dropped 41.3 per cent from what they were in 1941, while automobile registration fees were down 15.6 per cent, said Mr. Anderson.

It is imperative that every cent of highway revenue obtained by the state should be safeguarded carefully now and in the future. Passage of the "Road Fund Amendment" by the people at the election Sept. 11 will insure Maine of an excellent system of highways at a minimum cost to the taxpayers, stated Mr. Anderson.

Word was received Tuesday of the promotion of Sgt. Paul A. Stearns to the rank of Staff Sergeant on Aug. 25. Sgt. Stearns recently returned to Italy after being reported missing over Romania. In his letter he reported receiving the Purple Heart recently because of the "burns and a few little cuts" sustained during his experience.

Pvt. Robert E. Annis of Camp Rucker, Ala., is spending a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Annis.

Susie Lovejoy, 52e has completed her boot training at Hunter College and is now taking a special course.

Master Sgt. Charles Chapin is a member of the service in the Central Pacific area.

NEWRY CORNER

Mrs. Virginia Lloyd and children, Douglas and Patricia of Maryland are visiting at Sunnyside, guests of her mother, Mrs. Walter Bond.

School in Newry opened September 5 with Miss Mina Stevens as teacher.

Madeleine Bond and Prof. Fisher left for New York September 2, after two weeks spent at her home.

Mrs. Ernest Holt and daughter Helen went to Upton Sunday where Mrs. Holt will teach the coming year.

Sgt. Willard Wright and wife have been guests of his parents and Mrs. Fred Wright.

Friends of Eugene Holt of Hanover were much surprised to hear of his sudden death at his home Friday afternoon, September 1. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the late home at 2:30. Burial was in the family lot in the Hanover Cemetery.

Hildreth Meets Bethel Republicans Saturday

The picture above was taken on Mrs. W. R. Chapman's lawn Saturday morning when Republican candidates stopped here on a tour of the County. Left to right are: Horace Hildreth (candidate for Governor), Mrs. Henry Boyker, F. E. Russell, Mrs. E. A. Van Den Kerckhoven, Henry Boyker, Mrs. Isaac Dyer 2nd, Stephen Abbott, Isaac Dyer 2nd, Elmer Bennett. Standing on the steps is Judge Stearns of Norway. At the gathering on the Common the candidates were introduced by Mr. Boyker, candidate for reelection to the legislature. U. S. Senator Brewster and Congressman Hale were not here.

EDITORIAL

The question of allowing the sale of liquor in each town will be presented to the voters at the election next Monday. Bethel has been "dry" for several years, after an unsatisfactory period with malt beverage sales following the prohibition era, but two or more adjoining towns have at all times voted in favor of liquor stores or local sale of beer.

The referendum questions which are printed on the ballot have nothing to do with prohibition as the "wet" publicly continues to infer. The only question which the voters can decide is whether or not they wish to permit local sales in various ways. It should be obvious enough that persons interested in the sale of intoxicants are among those who are behind the movements every two years to influence a "Yes" vote, so their purpose is only to effect greater sales. Their argument pointing to the huge taxes bears out this statement, while those who claim "local people will get it anyway so why not have it here" seem to contradict their associates' appeal.

Regardless of the fact that it may not be uncommon for local people to drink beer in their homes and to encourage drinking by their children, we believe drinking and its excesses leading to drunkenness, accident, and crime, will increase as the points of sale are multiplied. The habit of drink frequently grows beyond the nice bounds of moderation, taking large amounts of money which could be much better used otherwise.

The argument of increased revenue is not sound. It cannot be good business to throw away five dollars so that one will reach the State's treasury. The "better business" enjoyed in a liquor town is only to the profit of liquor dealers. We believe that most local voters object to the conditions of a wet town, that they realize the fallacy of the many arguments advanced such as "they will have it anyway," "more business will come to the town," "failure of prohibition," etc. The only questions are plainly stated on the specimen ballot in this issue. A cross in the square under "No" on all four questions will register your objection to the conditions which are likely to occur in a "wet" town.

Nazi Armies Fall Back in France; Hitler's Hold on Balkans Shaken; Lend-Lease Totals 28 Billion

Released by Western Newspaper Union.
(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Carried on ox-carts, wounded Allied soldiers arrive at Myitkyina airstrip, Burma, for transfer to hospital plane.

EUROPE:

Nazis Pull Back

As fast-moving Allied forces pushed the Nazis back throughout all of France, German spokesmen hinted that Hitler's high command planned a withdrawal to the Reich frontier so as to concentrate the greatest number of men on a short line.

But even as the Nazis fell back, swift armored thrusts by the U. S. British and French continued to slash at the harassed enemy's flanks and threaten his encirclement from the rear, and clouds of Allied planes roared over the battle-line to dip low and gun the retreating German columns.

With the bulk of their forces crowded in the area immediately north and south of Paris, the Germans put up their stiffest rearguard resistance in this region. In southern France, Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's First Army fanned out quickly in all directions, with only scattered bands of enemy troops standing up briefly to slow the Allied drive.

After capture of the great French Mediterranean port of Marseille, American engineers went to work quickly to restore facilities damaged by the Germans and enable the Allies to funnel supplies quickly to their armies in the south. Use of Marseille's installations would relieve the trouble of practice of landing supplies on the sandy beaches in slow-draft craft.

Armistic arrangements for the German evacuation of Paris having fallen through, Free French armored columns were compelled to fight through a screen of Nazi defenders to liberate the city, with heavy U. S. fighters backing up Gen. Charles de Gaulle's troops, and helping to break enemy resistance. Occupation of Paris with its 3,000,000 people in need of food and fuel for utilities, created a supply problem for the Allies.

Turbulent Balkans

With formation of a peace government in this area, Ad. Hitler's steadily growing confidence in the Balkans grew as he considered the German army's withdrawal from the region.

As young King Michael announced his country's willingness to accept Allied peace terms, Russia called for Romania's expulsion of German troops from her homeland, or a war against Hungary to clear the latter from Transylvania, as the price of armistice terms.

Even as Romania acted to quit Germany, Bulgarian peace proposals reportedly were forwarded to the Allies, who were said to have insisted upon the Bulgars' withdrawal from all occupied Greek and Yugoslav territory as one of the armistice terms.

To prevent any peace factions from obtaining a grip in Hungary, the Nazi inspired regime dissolved all political parties, including the conservative elements.

Russ Pressure

Figuring in the Balkan countries' swing toward the Allied camp was the Russian's power-house drive bearing down from northern Romania.

As the Reds lurched there might at the enemy lines, they based down on the Ghat-Gap between the Transylvanian Alps and Black sea, forcing the way to the heart of the Balkans and the Persian Gulf. From this region, there was shut going but the Reds would reach the Bulgarian frontier.

POSTWAR PEACE:

Powers Confer

Meeting in the quaint, old Dumbarton Oaks estate in Washington, D. C., representatives of the U. S., Britain and Russia began momentous conferences on preserving postwar peace, with emphasis on the need of force as an ultimate resource. China was to join the conference after the Red had finished their talks, since Russia is not at war with the Japanese and is unwilling to discuss repressive measures against them.

Accepting the invitation of Secretary of State Cordell Hull to discuss postwar peace plans, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey went to the capital to consult on the conferences. Hull issued his invitation after Dewey expressed concern that the major powers might overlook the interests of the smaller nations.

Although the conferees were said to agree on the principle of employing force to suppress future aggression, plans under discussion called for the use of force only after measures for peaceful settlement had failed.

ANTI-TRUST:

Railroads Named

Charging maintenance of non-competitive rates, prevention of improvements and facilities of western lines, and suppressing development of other forms of transportation, the government filed an anti-trust suit against the Association of American Railroads, the Western Association of Railway Executives, 47 railroads, and the investment houses of J. P. Morgan and Company and Kuhn, Loeb and Company.

Placing its attention on western rail operations, the government declared that the rates of higher rates in that territory than in the east placed it at a competitive disadvantage, retarding its economic growth. The government also charged that movement of perishable commodities has been delayed by unwillingness to accept scheduled rates, and efforts have been made to stifle the development of truck and water transport.

In naming J. P. Morgan and Company and Kuhn, Loeb and Company in the suit, the government charged that they controlled major railroad financing and possessed substantial industrial interests in the East.

LEND-LEASE:

Aid Mounts

Declaring that continuation of lend-lease was essential for speedy victory until both Germany and Japan were brought to their knees, President Roosevelt revealed that the U. S. share of such assistance amounted to 28 billion dollars up to July 1, while other countries contributed in excess of 3 billion.

Of the 28 billion dollars, Britain received over 9 billion, Australia and New Zealand, 1 billion, Africa, the Middle East and Mediterranean, 3 billion, Russia, almost 6 billion; China and India, 1 1/2 billion, and Latin America, 172 million.

As an indication of the gigantic contribution U. S. industry has made to the war, figures showed that this country lent leased 11,000 planes and 500,000 trucks and other vehicles to Russia, 6,000 planes and 2,000 tanks to Great Britain, and 4,000 planes, 51,100 tanks and 73,000 trucks and other vehicles to the Mediterranean area.

AGRICULTURE:

Seek to Avoid Glut

Looking forward into the postwar world with all of its economic problems, the War Food Administration has sought to develop a procedure designed to avoid the accumulation of vast stores of surplus foods which might constitute a market threat when hostilities cease.

Under WFA plans, the agency now buys food only for foreseeable demands, and declares that any commodities required for relief in liberated countries will first be withdrawn from surplus and lend-lease stocks before purchases are made in the domestic market.

In establishing a surplus sales division, which is to sell current food stocks when demand is high to make room for fresh supplies, the WFA has set up machinery for future disposals.

World Plans

Drawn up with the avowed ambition of improving the efficiency of farm production and distribution, and bettering the economic conditions of rural populations, plans for a permanent international agricultural organization have been submitted for approval to the 44 United Nations by their food conference committee.

To act in an advisory capacity only, the proposed organization would consist of a governing body in which each nation would be represented, with efforts directed toward promoting research, spreading information and offering recommendations.

Other objectives of the plan include the elevation of nutritional standards throughout the world, and the development of agriculture as a contribution to an overall economic expansion.

PACIFIC:

Bombers Active

With thousands of Japanese troops stranded on the enemy's string of outer defense islands from the Solomons down to New Guinea, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's air command concentrated on the bombardment of shipping lanes through which supplies might seep to bolster the sagging garrisons.

At the same time, Adm. Chester Nimitz revealed that navy planes continued their attack upon the strategic Bonin Islands, which lie approximately 600 miles from the Japanese mainland and just above the U. S. occupied Marianas, in an effort to soften up these stepping stones to Tokyo.

In pressing their bombardments, General MacArthur's airmen ranged over Mindanao, important basing point for enemy shipping in the southern Philippines.

Fatherly Marines

Having been removed from Pacific duty on Iwo Jima, these native children were scrubbed clean by battle-hardened but fatherly U. S. Marines, then outfitted with new clothes and sent to rear area.

WAGES:

AFL Wants Boost

Declaring that the President possessed the power to raise wages, and that the stabilization act calling for a balance in the nation's economy afforded him the grounds for such a move, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor asked for abandonment of the "Little Steel" formula, limiting pay increases to 15 per cent of the January, 1941, level.

At the same time, the council charged the International Office Workers' union, which would embrace a vast number of white-collar employees, who, as a class, have felt the squeeze of rising living costs more than any other group, since most wage increases have been enjoyed in the heavier war-boomed industries.

In appealing for higher wages, AFL President William Green declared: "The working men and women of this nation have been made to suffer from a maladjustment that exists between wages and cost of living. This maladjustment has broken and depressed the peace-time standards of living."

U. S. LAND

More than 34 million acres have been acquired by the federal government for war purposes, exclusive of land taken over by the Defense Plant Corporation, according to Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming.

The war and navy departments have stated that 6,750,000 acres of their holdings are surplus for postwar purposes. Of this, 1,678,000 acres are tentatively classified as good agricultural land, 2,197,000 as grazing land, and 2,167,000 as forest tracts.

U. S. War Prisoners Seek 'Escape' in Camp Doings

Yanks Like Plays and Letter Liking for Soccer Football, but Letters From Home Greatest Source of Cheer.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

It is not often that we get direct communication from Americans in Germany, and so I am not ashamed to say that when I perused a communication from that source, I did not at first recognize what the frequently used abbreviation POW stood for.

Comparatively few Americans know the meaning of those three letters; perhaps none know what they mean to the POW himself.

POW is prisoner of war. According to the latest figures I have from the war department there are now 41,234 American soldiers, sailors, marines, merchant seamen held by the enemy.

The officials of the Red Cross know exactly what the conditions are under which those prisoners move and live and have their being in Allied prison camps in Germany or in the more than 40 hospitals for Allied wounded in the Reich or occupied countries. They have regular reports from the International Red Cross representatives who visit the camp regularly. The Red Cross says in effect: "So far as we know, the Germans have treated American prisoners in accordance with the Geneva agreement."

That is all it says.

But even if the Germans live up to both the spirit and the letter of the Geneva agreement, the lot of the prisoner of war is not to be envied. Recently, I studied some of the newspapers issued by men in the prison camps. Some have been released for publication. Others have not. Not that those withheld revealed any dark secrets of suffering. Quite the contrary. They simply prove what Kipling said about men who live in barracks and grow up to be plaster saints, and some of the humor might be a little, shall we say, unsavory.

The reason for this is expressed in the word escape. There are two kinds of escape which a prisoner thinks about. One is a safe get-away through the barbed wire and past the machine guns and quick-trigger sentinels. If he is wise, he doesn't spend too much time on such cogitation. The official advice to POWs is "don't try it."

The other kind of escape is defined by Webster as, "mental distraction or relief from the bondage of reality or routine; as, literature of escape."

The somewhat highly seasoned humor of some of the jokes and cartoons in the prisoners' papers are, technically speaking, "literature of escape." — this and the description of things they do to provide escape from the monotony of prison life.

Yank Ingenuity Shows

In Stage Productions

One of the easiest and most effective mental distractions and I am told that the time, effort and ingenuity that is put into the learning, producing, staging and acting of plays by these men is remarkable. "The Krieger Times," issued by the American airmen in Stalag Luft III, in Sagan, Germany, which I have before me as I write, is perhaps not typical because it was an edition especially for the home folks. But it has a story on page one headed "Theater" which begins with the statement which started me off on this topic. It says, "The Krieger (local) nickname for 'war prisoner' is assured of 'escape' in the theater." Then it explains that in order to accommodate the whole camp in an auditorium which seats only 28 per cent of the members, free performances of each play are given. And they include real drama.

The article records as recent productions that are first, never-did-fail, "Charlie's Aunt," "Our Town," the popular American play, nostalgic and easy to stage because it requires no scenery; "Tobacco Road," a popular, earthy piece with a run longer than the rest from Stalingrad; "The Man Who Came to Dinner," whose appeal perhaps lies in the fact that "the man" couldn't get away, either; and "Fleeger Frolies," an original musical comedy. (Fleeger is a German word.)

"Female costumes," it is explained, "are hired through German."

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Special diet packages go to our men in German POW hospitals.

As soon as a prisoner is captured in Germany he is taken to a transit camp where a Red Cross "captivity kit" is waiting. Since he usually doesn't take his baggage with him into Germany, especially if he arrives by parachute, he gets brush, comb, razor and such necessities.

Many of the German prisoners of war captured in Normandy have volunteered to help with the harvest in Great Britain.

All major youth organizations are cooperating in the drive to raise an army of school-age milkweed pod harvesters in order to get milkweed blossoms to replace kapok in life jackets for the armed forces.

THOSE NEW HOTEL RULES

The War Manpower commission has come out with an order to hotels to cut down on service. Change the sheets only twice a week, limit the towels to three a day, hire older help and reduce room service 50 per cent, it commands. All of which proves that the members of WMC haven't been stopping at hotels for the past year or they'd know the hotel men have been ahead of them.

"If I could get three towels a day I'd think I had political influence," declares Elmer Twitchell. "For the last year I've been bringing my own towels. And they cut room service practically out soon after Pearl Harbor. You not only can't get a hotel to serve breakfast in bed; it won't even guarantee it in the dining room!"

"I used to phone a hotel and quibble about the room and the number of windows. Now I just ask for a room with two towels and an occasional sheet," said Elmer.

The WMC has come out with one new order, however. It says hotels should limit guests to one bath a day, unless they want to use the same bath towel again. One bath towel per day is the new Federal limit. You can wring a towel out, however, and use it again without impairing the war effort.

We met a man with two towels and some spare sheets over one arm and a box of lunch under the other today. He said he was going to one of the smartest hotels in the city and was taking no chances.

Mr. Twitchell came out with a few verses on the subject:

No go to a hotel go
If you can't for service show;
Ask for little, with a laugh,
And be satisfied with half.

Do not grab the phone and roar,
"Hey, what am I paying for?"
Show that old familiar yell,
"Who called this a good hotel?"

Bathe but once and don't get sere;
Towels now have gone to war;
If the sheets are not too white,
They've been in the global fight.

Breakfast would you have in bed?
Then for days you'll stay unfed;
Want a bellhop P.D.Q.?
It's a good trick . . . if you do.

Ask no beer as of yore
Sent up to the 19th floor;
With your kicks don't be too free . . .
You COULD be in Normandy!

QUERY FOR

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

Elmer Twitchell today demanded of all candidates for President an answer to the following questions vital to American life:

1. What is your position on the proper ingredients for a wartime hamburger?
2. Are you for fewer slickers on windshields?
3. If elected will you do something about rose beetles?
4. Do you promise to work for Federal operation of lawn mowers?
5. Are you for a ceiling on shore dinners?
6. What is your attitude regarding the dirty towel so common to all soda lunt and quick-lunch-rooms?
7. Do you promise to fight for the return of the second crab to the American order of soft-shelled crabs?
8. Are you in favor of some regulations that will make it easier for the radio audience to tell when the battle ends and the commercial begins?
9. Will you take a stand for a two-minute limit to those borscht previews of coming events at picture houses?
10. Will you investigate the problem of what has become of porters at railroad stations?
11. Will you fight the idea being rapidly promoted among young Americans that the routine path to security is to make the round of the radio programs offering cash prizes for answers to easy questions?
12. How do you stand in the matter of cleaning the washrooms in railroad trains?
13. Will you do anything about making it possible to get spare parts for automobiles occasionally?
14. Are you for the return of cuffs on men's pants?
15. What is your position on women's hats?

Just about the time you decide that idleness is on the decline in America you tune in and hear another radio musical jingle for a chewing gum, hair tonic or beer.

Hitler must have a terrific yen these days to purge the fellow who told him U-boats would win the war.

There are to be fewer turkeys for civilians this year. The home-front patriot may have to undergo the terrible sacrifice of refusing a third helping.

USE OF AUTOS: A recent survey discloses that 74 per cent of car owners are driving their autos less than the recommended mileage. This reduction has come about through shorter and fewer trips rather than the laying up of cars for the duration. Gasoline and tire rationing have combined with patriotic motives to lessen car use, the survey continued.

TRAP SHOOTING: Capt. Joseph Hestand of Hallsboro, Ohio, has once again won the North American clay target championship in the 43th Grand American Trapshooting tournament held at Vandalia, Ohio. This is the fourth time he has captured the award, the previous occasions being in 1936, '38, and '39. He broke 200 straight targets to lead the field of entrants.

Expand Wash Stand To Fit Large Space

IT IS easy enough to make a small serving table out of an old wash stand but, when there is a large wall space crying for an imposing piece of furniture and nothing but a small wash stand on hand, the problem is something else again. Here you see the solution achieved with odds and ends of lumber, a pair of wooden boxes, a little paint and some plain gingham with the old wash stand at the center of it all.

The lower sketch shows how the carpenter work was done. Note the piece across the bottom of the stand to cover the irregular line, also the hinged arms so that the skirt may open out, and the piece across the top of the stand to make it the same thickness as the arms.

DUDE WOMAN

By PETER B. KYNE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Mary Sutherland is hired to Arizona by the ads of the Wagon Wheel dude ranch, operated by Ma and Pa Burdan. She is met at the station by Len Henley, whose father, Ham, has purchased the Burdan notes from the bank and feels that the ranch is now his. Len rides Mad Hatter, the rodeo to a finish. Mary, who has won three thousand dollars on him, now buys the Burdan equity in Wagon Wheel, outbidding Ham, who disapproves Len's match with Mary. Learning that Mary does not have the money to pay for the notes, Ham threatens foreclosure. Mary hires Ma and Pa Burdan and drives to the ranch. Sheriff Wade calls on Mary at Wagon Wheel.

CHAPTER XIII

She saw his car stop on top of the hill and she knew he was looking back at the Wagon Wheel. Forthwith she felt the exultation of victory. She soliloquized: "Take a good look at it now, Don Hamilton. When you see it again you'll have another heart-ache—provided you recognize it!"

The following morning she set forth alone and afoot to investigate the scene of next fall's duck shooting. She followed the easy footpath along the dry sandy bed of the Santa Maria until she came to the bend and stood gazing out over the low ground which still contained some water from the last freshet. With pleasure she saw a raft of perhaps two dozen pin-tail ducks out in the middle of it; a slight breeze was drifting them slowly toward the river, so Mary went in behind a clump of mesquite to hide, hoping, by patient waiting, to come home with a brace of them.

Suddenly she heard the thud of hooves coming up the wash; around the bend came a calf Mary judged might be six months old and she saw that it was exerting all its speed. Behind it came a man on a dun-colored horse, his rattle swinging. About twenty yards from the girl's point of concealment he made his cast and the loop settled over the calf's neck, the man tied hard and fast to the pommel of his saddle, the horse slid on his haunches to a halt and the calf, arrested suddenly, swung around and fell heavily on its side.

With amazing speed the rider left the saddle, ran to the calf and, with a short piece of rope, hog-tied it after a brisk battle. He then gathered some dry driftwood and kindled a fire; from his saddle he took a branding iron and thrust it in the flames, while Mary watched interestedly, her interest considerably kindled now by the sight of a cowboy trotting up the wash and mournfully howling. Apparently the calf was hers, for she came up and smelled it and lowered her head threateningly at the man, but retreated when he kicked her on the nose.

But Mary had noticed something. The cow wore the Wagon Wheel brand on her rump, so, of course, the calf was Mary's property also! She watched the man remove his branding iron from the flames and test its heat on an old dry white scumey log; it was not quite hot enough so he put it back in the fire, but not before Mary had seen that the brand on the log showed a W with wings. Later she would have called it Flying W. While she was pondering this incongruity the man branded the calf, cooled the iron in a vagrant pool, walked to his horse and tied the iron back on the saddle. And at that moment Mary decided to emerge from her mesquite bower and ask the stranger a few questions.

She was in the clear when she stepped on a dry twig that snapped. Instantly the man turned and saw her. She saw him with a gleam in his hand go swiftly in under the left breast of his leather wind-break and come back clasping a large pistol. Without an instant's hesitation he swung, raised the weapon and fired at her.

She felt a terrific blow on her right thigh, and her leg buckled under her. She fell prone on her elbows in the sand, her shotgun out-thrust from her, and as she fell another bullet lifted her hat off; a couple of seconds later a third bullet threw sand in her face, stinging her keenly and she thought: "This man is shooting at my head! He is trying to murder me. I must defend myself."

She rolled on her left side, rose a little on her left elbow, slid the safety catch forward, raised the gun and fired, all within the space of two seconds. The man's upraised arm dropped and he sat down abruptly and cried out. The girl watched him until she saw his right hand come up waveringly for a fourth shot—and then she gave him the other barrel and he went over backward, twitched twice, straightened his legs and was still.

The man's horse had bounded to one side when his rider fired his first shot, thus escaping Mary's blast of number six shot. She noticed the horse still was holding the calf, however, and she thought: "I must ride that horse home before I bleed to death." Forthwith she dropped her shotgun and commenced crawling toward him; she reached the taut rials and dragged herself along it to the horse's side, something him with words of reassurance as she came. Slowly she lifted herself up, stood on her sound leg and clung to the pommel. She stroked the horse's neck a minute and then commanded him to "come in" as she had heard ropers do at the rodeo. The well-trained animal at once walked forward a few steps to ease the strain on the rials, and Mary cast it loose from the pommel. Using the horse as a crutch she edged him over to a large boulder in the dry river bed, got her sound leg up on this boulder and threw her body across the saddle, with her right hand she lifted her numb leg over and sat erect; her left foot found the stirrup and she started for the ranch headquarters at a walk.

Pedro was sitting on the veranda of his cottage playing with his twins and saw her ride up from the river, so he knew something unusual had happened and ran to meet her. "I've been shot by a cattle thief, Pedro," she told him and rode around to the back of the dude house and paused before the outside door to her room. "Lift me off, Pedro, please, and carry me in to my room."

He did so, ran to summon Ma Burdan and Carlotta and continued on to Len Henley's trailer house where he knew there was a first-aid cabinet. The Burdons and Carlotta were gathered in the room when he returned with his supplies.

"You will all be so good as not to discuss this matter with anybody," he announced. "It will be embarrassing to Dona Maria. If this news reaches the world."

He led the Flying W horse over to the barn, unsaddled him and put him in a stall. Then he saddled Pablo, strapped the dead cowboy's carbine and gun boot on the saddle and jogged off down the river.

About twenty yards from the girl's point of concealment he made his cast, backtracking Mary's homebound trail. He returned in about an hour, driving the branded calf and the cow before him, turned them into the horse pasture and put up his horse. Then he backed the Burdan's station wagon out of the garage and drove it around to the outside door of Mary's room in the rear of the dude house. "You will be good enough to dress Dona Maria," he said to Carlotta. "I must take her to the hospital in Prescott. Senora Burdan, I will have a single mattress and blankets to make a bed in the station wagon."

"It's a superficial wound," Mary protested. "My thigh bone is uninjured."

"Sometimes a bullet will carry into the wound, Dona Maria, a little piece of the garment it has penetrated and that causes infection. The wound must be probed and cleaned and dressed again by a doctor. You will accompany me, Dona Maria, if you please."

Margaret Maxwell, dropping in for a visit to Len Henley in the hospital at Phoenix, found his father there chatting with him, for Len was improving rapidly and could sit up in bed now. Hard on Margaret's heels came his nurse carrying a telephone which she proceeded to plug in to the room telephone outlet. "The operator downstairs telephoned up to the desk on this floor that somebody is calling you from Prescott, Mr. Henley," she announced, and wiggled the receiver. "All right. Put that Prescott party on the line, Mabel," and she handed Len the telephone and left the room.

"Don Leonardo?" a weak voice asked. "This is Mary."

"Mary! What are you doing in Prescott? I thought you had gone back to New York."

wasn't I told," he demanded, "that Mary Sutherland had bought the Wagon Wheel ranch?"

"I have a sound alibi," Margaret protested. "Mary asked me not to tell you."

"Pappy?"

"I knew she'd bought it," Ham Henley confessed. "That's why I couldn't go through with my plan to buy it for you. She beat me to the bargain, an' after you told me you'd lost interest in ownin' it, I didn't see no reason to discuss it further."

What does she want now, telephoning in you?" he demanded suspiciously. "I thought you two had broke up."

"We're still on speaking terms, for goodness sake. She telephoned me because she's in trouble an' she didn't want the people standing around to know what the trouble is. They don't speak Spanish an' she had to confide in somebody that did. So, quite properly, she telephoned me—in Spanish. She's in the hospital at Prescott with a hole from a forty-five slug through her right thigh, put there by Breezy Wade. She shot it out with Breezy this morning and killed him with bird snoot. She's met his father and likes him; he was down to the Wagon Wheel and lunched there the other day and she's broken-hearted because she's brought home upon him. She says Hank Wade's sweet and she's half crazy because she's killed a man!"

"Three cheers," said his father complacently. "She killed a skunk!"

"She wants you to come up to her, Margaret," Len went on. "She's all alone and frightened."

"I'm practically there now," said Margaret Maxwell—and went. Father and son looked at each other and Len said bitterly: "And a swell job you did, selling yourself out of a hell-crazed daughter-in-law, not to mention the possibility of grandsons that certainly would have been tough enough to suit you."

"You sold her short yourself," his father declared. "All I did was give you a piece of fatherly advice. I didn't say you shouldn't marry her. I got more sense than to do that. Seems to me I just sort of advised you to go slow."

"You did. You started me thinking and I went so slow I stopped."

"Well," his father declared judicially, "just because she buys the Wagon Wheel, shoots it out with a rustler an' gets wounded, don't look to me like a solid reason for changing my opinion that marriage of a man of your world to a girl of her world would be a mistake."

"Might be a mistake," his son corrected.

"Oh, well, if you're going to split hairs, son, marry her as soon as you can hobble to the altar an' find out for sure. I said my say once an' it looks like I'm never going to be able to live it down. The girl hates me for it an' I'm not going to risk havin' you cool on me again. I'm through. If you marry her, Len, I'll be the best father-in-law that was ever jumped up out of the caucus an' if time proves me a sound prophet you'll never hear me natterin' it told you so."

"Well, what are you going to do now?"

"I'm going to telegraph her a dozen roses an' say cheers."

"She's in the orchid class, nappy."

"All right then, a dozen orchids. What'll I send for you?"

"One small spray of forget-me-nots."

"I'll hustle right along an' tend to it," his father declared, anxious to find an excuse to escape.

When Margaret walked into the hospital, she put her arms around Mary.

Her nurse came in with a cablegram which Sheriff Wade had just brought up, it having been sent in his care. Mary excused herself to Margaret and read it:

"Hope disgrace you quite happy stop sell that cattle ranch or give it away and return to New York immediately with Joe Blandings who is flying out in his own plane with nurse at my request to get you stop would not have known about this if he had not telephoned after reading his story in evening edition New York paper stop I am ashamed of you and you have broken my heart."

"A dismal chirp from my mother in London," Mary announced with a quaver in her voice, despite her valiant effort to appear undisturbed. "It seems I made the front page in a national story and now, back home, I'm always on her gun. Margaret, how do you suppose this news leaked out? We thought, with the sheriff's co-operation, we had it hermetically sealed."

"I'm terribly sorry, darling, but this morning's Prescott Register carries an eight-column head and a story with all the disgusting details," Margaret drew a tightly folded copy of the Register from her large handbag and handed it to Mary, who read it and promptly commenced to weep brokenheartedly.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

ettes is a troupe that knows all the answers. Not only do they possess the ultimate in feminine charm, but they swing their shapely legs in perfect unison and thrill audiences with their precision performances. But they also know a winner when they see one.

Several years ago this group voted red-haired Lucille Bremer the No. 1 girl most likely to win fame in pictures. That they scored a bull's-eye is now being proved at Metro, where that same Miss Bremer, formerly of the Rockettes, is winning much acclaim from all beholders. The only Rockette to achieve this distinction, her first camera chore was a straight dramatic role in "Meet Me in St. Louis," with Judy Garland.

No sooner was this completed than her dancing feet hied her to a rehearsal hall to prepare for Partner Fred Astaire and the lavish "Ziegfeld Follies," in which every star of note on the lot appears. And there are more to come—stellar roles in "Yolanda and the Thief" and "Red Shoes," to mention two.

Just About Everything

A triple threat in the charm category, Lucille Bremer has beauty, brains and photogenic appeal. In addition she can dance, act and project a magnetic personality through the camera lens onto celluloid and sound track.

"Know what you want and you are more than half way to it" is the philosophy of this girl with red hair and a determination to be ready for the breaks as they come.

She arrived in Hollywood only a year ago after attracting attention with her dancing at New York's Verjilles restaurant. She was tested for the screen in a scene from "Dark Victory," and her performance, viewed the next day, convinced her bosses they had not only a dancer but an actress as well.

Life History

Born in Amsterdam, N. Y., Lucille was dancing with the Philadelphia Opera company at the age of 12 and at 16 joined the famed Rockettes in New York. She toured Europe with this precision dance troupe.

"When we weren't on the stage giving performances," she explained, "we were on the stage rehearsing."

Back in the United States again, she left the troupe to take up a career as a model. She returned again to her dancing in "Panama Hattie," "Dancing in the Street," and at the Versailles, where she was discovered by a Metro executive.

Hollywood, usually blasé in its attitude toward newcomers, sat up and took notice from the first day Miss Bremer put her foot on the lot. Its first observation was that she strongly resembled Bette Davis. That could have been a disadvantage, but you see Metro has no Bette Davis.

She's a Go-Getter

The next thing that impressed the studio was that here was a girl not content to sit back and wait for things to happen. From the moment she arrived she began preparing herself and begging for a chance.

Her test had been dramatic. Nothing was said about a dancing role. But she practiced daily in the studio rehearsal halls. When you're a dancer you've got to practice to keep fit.

When, several months later, she was selected for the role of Fred Astaire's dancing partner, she was ready.

The screen, being a new medium, gave her something to think about. Here, for the first time, she was to play a role, not just a dancer. She had to think about her hair, her style, all that went on inside the studio. That's a little hard to do in one short year (if ever), but Lucille tried. She stuck her nose in the darnedest places. Sometimes all she got was a bad smell, but even then she was learning.

Tough School—But Good

All of which goes to prove that Roxy's Rockettes know what makes for success.

Yes, and so does Fred Astaire. Believe me, when you team up with Astaire you're in the fastest rhythm contest you can find in this country. And who knows? Maybe Carrot Top Lucille Bremer will go as far as any other partner Ginger Rogers. Anyway she's on her way now, and it won't be long till we know.

Hollywood's Forbidden Fruit

Gregory Peck will kiss Ingrid Bergman twice as long as the Hays office allows in "House of Dr. Edwards," but don't get excited—here's how they do it. First the camera records the kiss, then pans down to its reflection in a brook—and Mr. Hays can't say a word about it. . . . Ella Raines, who's doing "Arsene Lupin" for Universal, was given Charles Boyer's champagne for her birthday. Oh no, Charles wasn't in it.

Lucille Bremer

Dose of Laughter Gives Stimulus and Relaxation

If laughter could be ordered at the druggist's, any doctor would prescribe many laughs every day. A dose of laughter is a combination of stimulus like that of vitamin tablets plus the relaxation of the diaphragm, which is neglected in most exercises except deep breathing.

If you could X-ray yourself when you laugh, you would see astonishing results. Your diaphragm goes down, down, and your lungs expand. You are taking more oxygen than usual and that oxygen passes into the blood exposed in your lungs. As you laugh, the rate of exposure to oxygen is doubled or trebled. A surge of power runs from head to toes.

Few people realize that health actually varies according to the amount of laughter. So does recovery. People who laugh actually live longer than those who do not laugh.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Normally there are 20 per cent more tire fallouts during the summer months than others. Tests have shown that at a temperature of 90 degrees tires wear out twice as fast as at 60 degrees and that at 100 degrees they wear out five times as fast as at 40 degrees.

Even with production being restored at Far East rubber plantations and our synthetic plants working at peak, authorities believe there will be a tight rubber situation for some time following the end of the war.

Vote "YES"

VOTE "YES" for continuance of State Control. The efficiency of the present system has been tested for more than a decade. It has improved moral and civic conditions with resulting revenue to the State and Municipalities instead of to law breakers.
VOTE "YES" and save tax revenue of approximately $6,000,000 to the State of Maine.
VOTE "YES" and save the revenue that makes a most substantial contribution to the fund for pensions for the aged and blind, dependent children, and money needed for educational purposes.
VOTE "YES" and make certain that our aged and needy citizens will be maintained in comfort and happiness.
VOTE "YES" and protect the State's revenue at a time when the tax on gasoline and motor vehicles has substantially dropped.
VOTE "YES" and keep more than 7,500 people gainfully employed and provide jobs for the post-war era. Salaries and wages in this industry in Maine normally amount to more than $8,000,000 a year.
VOTE "YES" and keep Maine the "Vacationland" of the nation.
VOTE "YES" and save approximately $2,000,000 that go into the Federal Treasury from excise taxes on beer and ale sold in Maine.
VOTE "YES" and help maintain the Federal, State and Municipal Governments of the country that receive from the legal sale of beer and ale more than a MILLION DOLLARS EVERY DAY in the year.
VOTE "YES" and help Maine pay its share in winning the war and preserving the peace.
VOTE "YES" and protect the interests of those in the Armed Forces.

VOTE "YES" AND AVOID THE NECESSITY OF INCREASING OTHER TAXES IN THE STATE

PROHIBITION WAS A DISMAL FAILURE
It cost Maine millions of dollars wasted in futile efforts to enforce a law repugnant to the concepts and spirit of Democracy and Personal Liberty.
It brought about a hideous era of illicit business and the crime that followed in its wake.
It brought a national toll of—
1,656 men, women and children killed by dry agents,
494 dry agents slain,
hundreds killed, blinded or crippled from poisonous liquor, over 555,000 arrests connected with Prohibition.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To save fuel, always measure the water before heating rather than heating a kettle full of water then measuring out what is needed. Don't forget it's patriotic to conserve everything, including fuel!

To avoid a clean-up job after indoor painting, use a paper plate to hold the open paint can and the brush when attention must be turned elsewhere.

A half teaspoon of oil of peppermint added to the filling for chocolate pie gives a new and different flavor.

To make it easy to save fat for Uncle Sam, make a strainer by putting a cloth in a 10-cent embroidery hoop. This eliminates need of washing a greasy strainer and cloth may be used to kindle a fire.

Courageous Allies See War at Its Worst and Carry On

By Ernie Pyle

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.—When you're wandering around our very far-flung front lines—the lines that in our present rapid war are known as "fluid"—you can always tell how recently the battle has swept on ahead of you.

You can sense it from the little things even more than the big things.

From the scattered green leaves and the fresh branches of trees still lying in the middle of the road.

From the wisps and coils of telephone wire, hanging brokenly from high poles and entwining across the roads.

From the gray, burned-powder rims of the shell craters in the gravel roads, their edges not yet smoothed by the pounding of military traffic.

From the little pools of blood on the roadside, blood that has only begun to congeal and turn black, and the punctured steel helmets nearby.

From the square blocks of building stone still scattered in the village streets, and from the sharp-edged rocks in the roads, still uncrushed by traffic.

From the burned-out tanks and broken carts still unrecovered from the road. From the cows in the fields, lying grotesquely with their feet to the sky, so newly dead they have not begun to bloat or smell.

From the scattered heaps of personal debris around a gun. I don't know why it is, but the Germans always seem to take off their coats before they flee or die.

From all these things you can tell that the battle has been recent—from these and from the men dead so recently that they seem to be merely asleep.

And also from the inhuman quiet. Usually battles are noisy for miles around. But in this recent fast warfare a battle sometimes leaves a complete vacuum behind it.

The Germans will stand and fight it out until they see there is no hope. Then some give up, and the rest pull and run for miles. Shooting stops. Our fighters move on after the enemy, and those who do not fight, but move in the wake of the battles, will not catch up for hours.

There is nothing left behind but the remains—the lifeless debris, the sunshine and the flowers, and utter silence.

An amateur who wanders in this vacuum at the rear of a battle has a terrible sense of loneliness. Everything is dead—the men, the machines, the animals—and you alone are left alive.

One afternoon we drove in our jeep into a country like that. The little rural villages of gray stone were demolished—heartbreaking heaps of still smoking rubble.

We drove into the tiny town of La Dénais, a sweet old stone village at the "T" of two gravel roads, a rural village in rolling country, a village of not more than 50 buildings. There was not a whole building left.

Rubble and broken wires still littered the streets. Blackish gray-stone walls with no roofs still smoldered inside. Dead men still lay in the street, helmets and broken rifles askew around them. There was not a soul nor a sound in town; the village was lifeless.

As we stood there talking in the lonely field a soldier in coveralls, with a rifle slung over his shoulder, ran up breathlessly, and almost shouted:

"Hey, there's a man alive in one of those planes across the road! He's been trapped there for days!"

We stopped right in the middle of a sentence and began to run. We hopped the hedgerow, and ducked under the wing of the upside-down plane. And there, in the next hour, came the climax to what certainly was one of the really great demonstrations of courage in this war.

We ran to the wrecked British plane, lying there upside down, and dropped on our hands and knees and peered through a tiny hole in the side.

A man lay on his back in the small space of the upside-down cockpit. His feet disappeared somewhere in the jungle of dials and rubber pedals above him. His shirt was open and his chest was bare to the waist. He was smoking a cigaret.

After we had finally got him out, he said as he lay on the stretcher under a wing, "Is it possible that I've been out of this plane since I crashed?"

Everybody chuckled. The doctor

He turned his eyes toward me when I peeked in, and he said in a typical British manner of offhand friendliness, "Oh, hello."

"Are you all right?" I asked, stupidly.

He answered, "Yes, quite. Now that you chaps are here."

I asked him how long he had been trapped in the wrecked plane. He said he didn't know for sure as he had got mixed up about the passage of time. But he did know the date of the month he was shot down. He told me the date. And I said out loud, "Good God!"

For, wounded and trapped, he had been lying there for eight days!

His left leg was broken and punctured by an ack-ack burst. His back was terribly burned by raw gasoline that had spilled. The foot of his injured leg was pinned rigidly under the rudder bar.

His space was so small he couldn't squirm around to relieve his own weight from his aching back. He couldn't straighten out his legs, which were bent above him. He couldn't see out of his little prison. He had not had a bite to eat or a drop of water. All this for eight days and nights.

Yet when we found him his physical condition was strong, and his mind was as calm and rational as though he were sitting in a London club. He was in agony, yet in his correct Oxford accent he even apologized for taking up our time to get him out.

The American soldiers of our rescue party cursed as they worked, cursed with open admiration for this British flier's greatness of heart which had kept him alive and sane through his lonely and gradually hope-diminishing ordeal.

One of them said, "God, but these Limies have got guts!"

It took us almost an hour to get him out. We don't know whether he will live or not, but he has a chance. During the hour we were ripping the plane open to make a hole, he talked to us. And here, in the best nutshell I can devise from the conversation of a brave man whom you didn't want to bother with trivial questions, is what happened.

He was an RAF flight lieutenant, piloting a night fighter. Over a certain area the Germans began letting him have it from the ground with machine-gun fire.

The first hit knocked out his motor. He was too low to jump, so—foolishly, he said—he turned on his lights to try a crash landing. Then they really poured it on him. The second hit got him in the leg. And a third bullet cut right across the balls of his right-hand forefingers, clipping every one of them to the bone.

He left his wheels up, and the plane's belly hit the ground going uphill on a slight slope. We could see the groove it had dug for about 50 yards. Then it flopped, tall over nose, onto its back. The pilot was absolutely sealed into the upside-down cockpit.

"That's all I remember for a while," he told us. "When I came to, they were shelling all around me."

Thus began the eight days. He had crashed right between the Germans and Americans in a sort of pastoral no-man's-land.

For days afterwards the field in which he lay surged back and forth between German hands and ours.

His pasture was pecked with hundreds of shell craters. Many of them were only yards away. One was right at the end of his wing. The metal sides of the plane were speckled with hundreds of shrapnel holes.

He lay there, trapped in the midst of this inferno of explosions. The fields around him gradually became littered with dead. At last American strength pushed the Germans back, and silence came. But no help. Because, you see, it was in that vacuum behind the battle, and only a few people were left.

GI Wounded Never Give Up

The days passed. He thirsted terribly. He slept some; part of the time he was unconscious; part of the time he undoubtedly was delirious. But he never gave up hope.

After we had finally got him out, he said as he lay on the stretcher under a wing, "Is it possible that I've been out of this plane since I crashed?"

who had arrived said, "Not the remotest possibility. You were sealed in there and it took men with tools half an hour to make an opening. And your leg was broken and your foot was pinned there. No, you haven't been out."

"I didn't think it was possible," the pilot said, "and yet it seems in my mind that I was out once and back in again."

"FULL EMPLOYMENT" AFTER THE WAR

IN WASHINGTON THE theorists whose announced purpose has been, and still is, to "make over" America, tell us that, following the close of the war, private enterprise will be given an opportunity to demonstrate whether or not it will still work. If, when peace comes, private enterprise can provide "full employment," the profit system will be allowed to continue, but if not it must give way to the planned economy of the theorists.

Just what is meant by "full employment?" With the demands of a global war to meet we have had more than 50 million employed workers and another 10 million in the armed services. We have heard much of manpower shortage; industries have competed wildly in the labor market; women, some millions of them, have been asked to, and have, filled men's jobs. Must private enterprise in peace time provide from 50 to 60 million jobs if it is to be allowed to continue as America's economic system?

In 1939, one year before Pearl Harbor, we were producing much in the way of war equipment for England and for our own war preparations. We were then told the depression difficulties had been solved. In 1939 34 million workers had jobs. That condition followed an expenditure of some 20 billion dollars on the part of the government in an effort to create a market for American farms and factories.

Following the close of the war, and before the armed forces are disbanded, the back to the home movement on the part of women workers will probably reduce the employables to around 50 million. That would be 16 million more than those having jobs in 1939. That is what private industry is supposed to care for, or else.

In 1943 the government permitted United States Steel to retain, as a rainy day surplus out of which to provide peacetime jobs, enough to meet a one day payroll for all of its wartime employees. What was true of Steel was true of other major industries.

Our Washington theorists have, and are continuing to, make it impossible for private enterprise to do the job they say it must do if the private enterprise system is to be allowed to live. It would seem we have a choice of retaining the theorists or the private enterprise system.

FREE ENTERPRISE AND STANDARD OF LIVING

IT WAS, I BELIEVE, in 1906 that Chrysler, then an Iowa railroad superintendent, bought his first automobile, for which he paid more than $5,000. To start that car he had to get out and turn a crank; its lights for night driving were kerosene lamps; to protect the occupants from the inclemencies of the weather, curtains could be buttoned to frames on the side; if fortunate the driver might attain a speed of as much as 25 miles an hour.

Before the war started a far better car could be bought for less than one seventh the price Chrysler paid, a car with all the gadgets that makes for the convenience and luxury of driving.

The difference to the consumer, the better car at but a fraction of the cost, was produced by the American system of competitive free enterprise.

Competitive free enterprise brought quality up and price down to where cars were possible for 30 million homes and farms. It put America, urban and rural, on wheels behind an internal combustion engine.

Over the past 40 years competitive free enterprise in the automobile field did far more than produce better and cheaper cars. It created jobs, better than five million of them. Jobs that meant the maintenance of homes. Jobs at ever-increasing wages. Jobs that provided a market for the produce of the farm.

In no other country, at this or any other time, has there been such a record of progress, such an ever-increasing standard of living, as we have had in the United States. Despite the evidence to the contrary Washington theorists attempt to tell us our competitive free enterprise system has failed, and government, with its regimentation and regulations, should take over our production. To them evidence means nothing as compared to their theories.

THERE IS A "know how" to the building of ships and airplanes, to the making of guns and tanks, to the production of chemicals and munitions. Such "know how" is recognized by the Manpower commission and the army and indispensable men in such lines are not called to the colors. Food is a first essential of war. Without food all other war production would be valueless. There is a needed "know how" in the production of food, but this was not recognized and too many farm boys were drafted.
